Zackenberg Research Station

By Naja Abelsen, artist

Zackenberg and science, two exciting topics where it seemed very natural to focus on the scientists themselves and with their patient work with weird measuring instruments. Often we see the scientists' results and not themselves so much because, for them, the process behind their work is just as exciting. Their curiosity and wonder is worth gold for me and should be for all of us.

Design-wise the stamps were bound together by the five areas shown in the circles that make up Zackenberg's solid basic research and it fitted so well with five lemmings in the food chain. My inspiration is due to the Zackenberg people to whom I thank for their conversations and for the loan of their reference photos.

The drawings are made with markers as, using a simplified colour spectrum gives my desired effect where the instruments can be shown most clearly in the small format of stamps. I chose lemming, as an example of climate change because it is so simple and clear - in the scientists' measured area the results look poor - the lemming population is decreasing and this, in turn, affects the four animals that prey on the lemming. The graph is shown in the first-day cancellation postmark.

For me science is so fascinating because it must be so exact and is the very opposite of my great artistic freedom! At the same time, I enjoy the benefits of all scientific results and the photos taken during the scientists' day to day work in Greenland (and in general), so it is with my great gratitude that I am able to show the people behind the scenes.

And what a lovely dream it must be to live up there in the distant and wild north eastern Greenland. It was through the work with the stamps and by reading about Zackenberg on their website that I learnt so much! <http://zackenberg.dk>.

About Naja Abelsen

Naja graduated from the Danish Design School in 1996 and has always worked as an artist participating at the Exhibition Active in Denmark and also abroad: this season at the beautiful Søbygaard

Museum, with a large, retrospective at the exhibition: RETINA 1.5 - on 23rd October 2016. At the time of writing Naja is working on the illustrations for a Greenlandic children's book.

Her artworks are distributed mostly along gradually fixed themes: people, animals, Greenlandic mythology and shamanic worldview of Love Being plus dance. They are expressed in drawings and also watercolours. In all her artistic creations (unless it's a specific commission) pops up a soul and a natural, moving expression. This, paired with her technical artistic competence, hopefully gives the viewer an experience in which they can reflect and from which the artist can then develop her own future works.

In the past year, more photographs have become available with the first photo exhibition in January 2016 and also a photo assignment for a corporate customer. Before then, the photography used as reference material came from photographs taken in daily life.

New book from POST Greenland

'The Civil Aviation history of Greenland 1960-2015'
This history is told through the stamps in our Civil Aviation series.

Before 2011 it was rare for aircraft to be depicted on Greenlandic stamps. It had actually only happened five times on stamps issued during the period 1976 - 2010. This is why POST Greenland made the decision to launch a new stamp series with the purpose of narrating the fascinating history of the Civil Aviation in Greenland.

The Aviation series, as we call it, was completed in May this year. The series includes 13 stamps with designs of aircraft and helicopters that were in use from the end of the 1950's to 2015.

All the stamps are issued in normal complete sheets with the printing technique used being combined intaglio and offset. The artist who created all the designs is the legendary Norwegian illustrator and engraver Martin Mörck who has engraved over 100 Greenlandic stamp designs up until today.

To tell the story, we have been working with one of the greatest experts, former Area Manager at Air Greenland, Ole Dam who worked for the airline from 1962 to 2003.

Besides the fascinating story about Greenland's civil aviation, this book also includes 13 stamps from the series, stamped with the first day cancellation. The aviation book has been produced especially for all our followers who are interested in aviation, for stamp collectors and for those readers who are interested in finding out more about Greenland's history and development.

Greenland during the Second World War – as seen through the eyes of Greenlanders. Part One

By Pertti Frandsen, Philatelic Manager

We are very pleased to present this new series which covers a part of our history that has not yet been told through stamps: Greenland, during the Second World War, as seen through the eyes of Greenlanders.

We are planning to issue a ten stamp series printed in combined offset and intaglio which will be completed in 2020, on the 75th anniversary of the end of the Second World War.

The series begins with the three stamps which are issued on 17th October, with partially photographed images from the War period. Some aspects are, therefore, photographic reproductions from that time, whilst on other parts of the stamps the artist has added her own artistic impression to the design. The artist who has designed this series is Naja Rosing-Asvid, who also created the 2015 series 'Architecture in Greenland'. Martin Mörck engraved all ten stamps.

In the early part of the Second World War, on 9th April 1940, Denmark was occupied by Nazi Germany. As a result, Greenland ended up being isolated from Denmark and no supplies could reach the country. Therefore, the Greenlanders received all their supplies from the USA and Canada throughout the War until 1945. They paid for these supplies by selling cryolite and through cod fishing.

The Second World War also changed Greenland. It happened gradually with the country's first airfields being constructed, new and 'exotic' products being introduced, as well as food rationing. In East Greenland there was also some actual face to face combat.

Until 1940 the Greenlanders had been very isolated from the rest of the world. The Danish government, that governed Greenland as a colony, was convinced that the Greenlandic culture would be diluted or even disappear and the local population would be eradicated if the borders were opened up to the rest of the world. In many ways Greenland opened up to the outside world as a result of the War; political relations changed and news coverage was in a different form to that which Greenlanders had been used to.

By the end of the Second World War, Greenland had become the allies' important middle station for North Atlantic air traffic from the USA and the United Kingdom. After the War, the USA developed a great geopolitical interest in Greenland, an interest which still exists to this day.

POST Greenland hopes that this stamp series will uncover facets of Greenland's history that many readers and collectors were not aware of and, thereby, contribute to the general storytelling about Greenland.

About the artist

Naja Rosing-Asvid has an architecture degree and is an autodidact artist. She works with different media and forms of expression in her art. The materials, used to put her pictures and installations together, are often found in nature or from waste products found in the towns. For the last ten years Naja has worked independently with different creative genres i.e. art, exhibition design, urban design, scenography, children's books.

To find out more about the artist and her art please refer to her webpage www.NajaRosingAsvid.dk.

Her own thoughts about this stamp series:

"The series narrates the story about wartime seen through the eyes of Greenlanders. The illustrations mirror the moods and episodes from that period, which have made a great impression on the people and the country's development. The stamps are designed with retro colours that suit the time period and are reminiscent of the camouflage colours used during the war."

The Crown Prince Couple celebrate their Copper wedding anniversary

By Pertti Frandsen, Philatelic Manager

There are warm and strong ties between Greenland and our royal family. The ties are bound with deep respect for each other and have been confirmed through generations.

I wouldn't imagine a day passes by without Greenland being in the Crown Prince Couple's minds, since the gold in their wedding rings originates from the goldmine in Nanortalik, a present from the then Greenland Home Rule Government.

To highlight this deep respect, POST Greenland will issue a commemorative stamp to celebrate the Royal Couple's Copper wedding anniversary to take place on 14th November this year.

In June 2004, only seven weeks after their Royal Highnesses The Crown Prince and The Crown Princess' wedding, they went on their first official visit together - a summer cruise to Greenland.

It was a special honour, although it was not very surprising that the newlywed Royal couple decided to pay Greenland a visit.

Crown Prince Frederik is not the only member of the Danish royal family who has a close relationship with Greenland. His mother HM Queen Margrethe has always had a profound fascination for both the Greenlandic and the Faroese societies, just like her parents King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid before her. To Crown Prince Frederik, however, Greenland still holds something special.

In 2000 he participated in the Sirius Expedition 2000 marking the 50th anniversary of the Sledge Patrol Sirius: a 2,800 km journey together with five friends, three sledges and 42 dogs from Qaanaaq in Northwest Greenland to Daneborg in Northeast Greenland. A part of Northeast Greenland subsequently was named after him: 'Crown Prince Frederik Land'.

The expedition turned out to be a 'journey in life' for him, where he was able to live in the present.

The royal family's summer cruise to Greenland on-board the royal yacht was extraordinarily appealing to the entire Greenlandic population.

Everywhere the royal family appeared they were applauded and met by smiling people with waving flags.

The Crown Prince showed his wife glimpses of what Greenland has to offer and the Greenlandic population received our new Crown Princess with warmth and immense joy.

General Manager Per Svendsen said in his speech to the royal couple that the Crown Prince and Crown Princess don't merely appear as faces on stamp designs, but they are, however, two individuals of strong character, acting as role models for us all.

The 15th October was another joyful day in the Commonwealth of the Realm because on this day the HRH Crown Princess gave birth to the Crown Prince couple's first child, a son who was baptised in January 2006 as Christian Valdemar Henri John, Prince of Denmark. As the Crown Prince couple's firstborn, HRH Prince Christian is the successor to the throne after HRH The Crown Prince.

The Royal Crown Prince family has been blessed with 3 more children since then.

In August 2014, the Royal Crown Prince with his family visited Greenland and they were welcomed with open arms as the Greenlanders celebrated their arrival.

The Royal couple and their four children were dressed in their colourful Greenlandic national costumes. They all looked beautiful as the Royal yacht 'Daneborg' went ashore in selected towns and villages along the Greenlandic coast. Unlike their visit a decade earlier, it was their children this time that stole the show, with the crowds cheering them on.

Prince Christian, only 8 at that time, was handsomely dressed in his white parka, black trousers and sealskin boots, whilst Princess Isabella Henrietta Ingrid Margrethe, only seven, was beautifully dressed in the east Greenlandic national costume.

The then 3 year old twins, who at baptism also were given the Greenlandic names Minik and Ivalo, were also magnificently dressed in their north Greenlandic costumes.

The Royal twins' full names are Vincent Frederik Minik Alexander and Princess Josephine Sophia Ivalo Mathilda.

Wherever the Crown Prince's family arrived, they were joined by hospitable inhabitants who, with great enthusiasm and a huge interest, followed the royal family around the villages.

With this stamp, issued in both whole sheets and also separate souvenir sheets, POST Greenland sends our beloved Crown Prince couple congratulations on their copper wedding anniversary on 14th November 2016. We look forward to a warm and happy reunion upon the Crown Prince couple's next visit to Greenland.

2016 Christmas Stamps

By artist Sissi Møller

When designing my two Christmas stamps I decided that they must be able to stand together but also be able to function independently. Creating two stamp images was an opportunity to make two windows. With the first stamp you look outwards and feel the fresh Christmas morning in bright and light colours. On the other stamp, you look into a home and poinsettia is in focus, representing Christmas and cosy relationships in Greenland. For me, Christmas is also about enjoying the fresh cold weather as well as Christmas warmth with family and friends. It was certainly this that I wished to create in a simple way in my stamps.

As an artist I have worked with portraits- in particular, with large format abstract paintings. So, with this commission it was important for me as an artist to work with the non-figurative, not being result orientated and being more fluent in my work. The blue colour has been used throughout and here I almost unconsciously have been inspired by my home country, Greenland. It is a process as an artist and Greenlander, which has been extremely important to me in my future work. I also design with graphics and sculpture.

In my artistic field, I work best intuitively and am process-orientated - letting my pieces of art become alive with vivacity, movement and transparency.
